KANSAS LEGISLATIVE INSIGHTS NEWSLETTER | JANUARY 21, 2025

WEEK 2: A FAST START, A CAUTIOUS PATH AHEAD

The Kansas Legislature energetically kicks off the new session with a packed agenda that reflects the urgency of key issues. As the session progresses, there seems to be a combination of momentum building along with caution about the challenges that lie ahead. This week's Kansas Legislative Insights includes a "bet you didn't know this" tidbit about Kansas politics and an update from the military, judiciary, and the governor regarding their respective agendas. In addition, it highlights two timely informational briefings that may shape the session's landscape.

THE RESOLUTION TO SIT DOWN

The Kansas Legislature uses two types of resolutions: simple and concurrent. Simple resolutions focus on either the House or Senate and handle matters within that chamber without needing the other house's action. They are often used for organizational tasks, rule changes, or expressing the chamber's views on specific issues.

If not addressed, simple resolutions expire at the end of the session. Senate rules mandate that resolutions be written, read, and laid over for one day, though a majority vote can waive these requirements. On the first day of the legislative session, both the House and Senate prioritize passing a resolution to assign floor seats. SR 1702 and HR 6002 were approved by voice vote to place each member in their designated spot. Typically, the Speaker and the President of the Senate handle these assignments, but they take effect only after a resolution is passed. Seating and office assignments can be the most contentious decisions legislative leaders make at the session's start.

GRAIN BELT EXPRESS BRIEFINGS

The Joint House Water and Energy Committee and the Senate Utilities Committee convened last Thursday to receive an update on the Grain Belt Express (GBE) transmission project. The session included testimony from Invenergy, the Kansas Corporation Commission (KCC), and the Kansas Farm Bureau, focusing on the project's benefits, landowner impacts, and infrastructure developments.

Invenergy reported that GBE will deliver an $8.1 billion economic boost during construction, create 19,350 jobs, and save Kansans $1.2 billion in energy costs over 15 years. The project is also set to generate $500 million in property tax revenue to support schools and communities. Invenergy emphasized its commitment to landowner protections, offering compensation at 110% of market value, crop disturbance reimbursements, and flexible annual payment options.

KCC representatives Justin Grady and Paul Owings outlined the project's technical aspects and development process, emphasizing its compliance with Kansas statutes. They highlighted how GBE will reduce grid congestion, enhance energy reliability, and meet the state's growing energy needs while adhering to rigorous review standards.

Wendee Grady of the Kansas Farm Bureau addressed the organization's evolving stance on renewable energy and transmission projects. She highlighted a balanced approach that supports renewable development while safeguarding landowner rights and minimizing agricultural disruptions.

JUSTICE GAP AND FUTURE CHALLENGES

State lawmakers held three joint sessions in the first week to hear the State of the Military, State of the Judiciary, and State of the State.

On Wednesday morning, Major General Michael T. Venerdi, the State's Adjutant General and commander of the Kansas National Guard and Air Guard, addressed the House of Representatives and Senate. He provided updates on the military's activities in the state and abroad over the past year.

Major Gen. Venerdi emphasized the Guard's role in maintaining Kansas's health, both financially and otherwise. He stated, "These partnerships immensely benefit Kansas with an annual economic impact exceeding $5.2 billion and a seat at the table when national security decisions are being made."

On the afternoon of Jan. 15, Kansas Supreme Court Chief Justice Marla Luckert addressed the joint meeting of the Kansas House of Representatives and Senate. She expressed her commitment to a strong, accessible, and trusted legal system for the state's citizens. However, she warned that maintaining the status quo risks this dream. She made this grim prediction because Kansas, like the rest of the country, faces a justice gap. There appears to be a growing divide between people who can afford basic legal services and those who cannot. Additionally, even if they can afford it, people may struggle to find an attorney within a reasonable driving distance to represent them. The Chief Justice urged the legislature to support the steps the Court has already proposed to address this statewide shortage of attorneys.

The day concluded on Wednesday evening with Governor Laura Kelly delivering her seventh State of the State Address to a joint meeting of the Kansas House of Representatives and Senate. In her remarks, Gov. Kelly encouraged legislators to look to the future and address the issues that will challenge our state over the next 75 years. She also highlighted the achievements of her administration, including significant gains in economic development, water programs, initiatives for children and families, and establishing a strong financial footing for the State of Kansas.

The governor proposed several issues for the Legislature to address. Chief among these is her continued call for Medicaid expansion in Kansas. She also suggested pausing further tax cuts at this time. The following morning, she released her spending recommendations in her budget for Fiscal Year 2026 and beyond.

GOVERNOR'S FISCAL YEAR 2026 SPENDING RECOMMENDATIONS

On Thurs., Jan. 15, Gov. Kelly announced her budget and legislative priorities. Secretary of Administration and Budget Director Adam Proffitt released the details at a joint meeting of the Kansas House of Representatives Committee on Appropriations and Kansas Senate Committee on Ways and Means.

Proffitt emphasized the need to curtail spending to preserve the state's surplus, which is projected to be depleted by 2029 if current spending trends persist. He noted that much of the recent expenditures involve one-time or short-term spending, aligning with the governor's intent to prioritize stability.

The highlights of the budget recommendations include:

- Continue investments in early childhood care and education.
- Provide free school meals for qualifying children.
- Fully fund Kansas public K-12 schools for the seventh year in a row.
- Prioritize water.
- Expand Medicaid to 150,000 Kansans.
- Invest in higher education.
- Continue to repair Kansas' foster care system.
- Bolster health care services and hospitals.
- Provide funding for agriculture and natural resources.
- Provide support for disability and employment services.
- Improve public safety.
- Invest in economic development and tourism.

THIS WEEK IN THE KANSAS LEGISLATURE – JANUARY 21–24, 2025

This week, committees in both the Kansas House of Representatives and Kansas Senate are working on the two defining issues of this session: property tax relief, which is a key issue for the Republican leadership, and a comprehensive review of the state budget.

The Senate Assessment and Taxation Committee will hold hearings on bills and specifically work on a constitutional amendment that places an annual limit on property valuation growth. A hearing is scheduled on SB 10, which provides property tax exemptions for certain personal property, including watercraft, marine equipment, off-road vehicles, motorized bicycles, and certain trailers. Additionally, there will be a hearing on SB 35, which discontinues state property tax levies for the Kansas educational building fund and the state institutions building fund and finances them from the state general fund.

The House Taxation Committee is hearing HB 2011, concerning taxation relating to the total mills levied by school districts. The current mill levy is 20 mills; the bill lowers the mill levy to 18.5 mills.

The House Budget Committees and the House Appropriation Committee are reviewing state agency budgets and making recommendations. The schedule calls for the House of Representatives to have a budget out of the House by mid-February.
