KANSAS LEGISLATIVE INSIGHTS NEWSLETTER | MARCH 1, 2024

WHAT'S LEFT AFTER THE TURNAROUND DEADLINE?

This week's calendar was light as committees prepared to consider bills from the other chamber. The House Appropriations and Senate Ways and Means Committees continued to finalize their respective budget proposals. Wednesday, the House Appropriations Committee approved $80 million for increasing Medicaid provider rates for hospitals and physicians. Republican legislators touted this as an alternative to Medicaid expansion. It is designed to help struggling rural hospitals and incentivize more physicians to take Medicaid patients. The committee removed $715 million from Gov. Laura Kelly's budget proposal for Medicaid expansion. Thursday, the Senate Ways and Means Committee also deleted Medicaid expansion funding from the Senate budget proposal.

Thursday, the House Commerce Committee heard testimony from the Kansas Commerce Department about economic development legislation that could help Kansas attract an electric vehicle plant or a national company headquarters to Kansas. Tax incentives similar to the Panasonic deal would be used to attract a company(ies). The state is in negotiations with several companies that would benefit from the tax incentives. No potential price tag was discussed.

Both Senate and House Health Committees heard testimony on HB 2791, banning gender-affirming care for minors by doctors. It generated emotional testimony from both sides. Many of the proponents and opponents testified before both committees. Opponents claimed that many of the proponents were from out of state. In the afternoon, the House Health and Human Services Committee heard testimony on HB 2791 for nearly 90 minutes. The House Health Committee also heard a similar bill, HB 2792, which would prohibit gender-transition surgery on minors, would authorize professional discipline against a physician who performs such surgeries, and would adopt a standard of care for gender-transition care services. There were no proponents for the bill, only opponents.

BLESSED BILLS

Last week, House and Senate leaders blessed more than 50 bills. The process of blessing bills is the referral of non-exempt bills to an exempt committee (i.e., Appropriations, Federal and State Affairs, or the Tax Committees). This allows bills to continue to be eligible for consideration. There are numerous reasons for blessing bills: (i) time constraints; (ii) ongoing negotiations for potential compromises; or (iii) political considerations, to name a few. Blessing a bill can also be a courtesy to legislators to keep an issue before the Legislature. For example, last week the Senate scheduled SB 493 for floor debate. SB 493 concerns ignition interlock devices (IIDs) and would require manufacturers of such devices to pay fees to the Kansas Highway Patrol (KHP) for administration, oversight, and monitoring of the IID program. Even though the bill had been scheduled for floor debate, it was passed over because of a dispute over the fiscal note. Nevertheless, the bill was blessed and referred back to the Senate Judiciary Committee for further consideration.

Among the other blessed Senate bills were SB 273, eliminating the zoning and planning authority for cities in the three-mile area extending from the city boundaries, and SB 457, which prohibits public utilities from exercising eminent domain for the siting or placement of solar facilities.

In addition to the two gender-affirming care bills (HB 2791 and 2792), the House blessed bills related to abortion, education, $40 million for building homeless shelters for local governments, and expanding the membership of the Wildlife and Parks Commission. The “blessed” education bills include HB 2736, revising the formula for calculating special education, and HB 2506, authorizing virtual school students to participate in activities that are regulated by the Kansas State High School Activities Association. HB 2749 requires medical care facilities to report the reasons for each abortion performed to the Secretary of Health and Environment. HB 2739, with some exceptions, requires state-managed funds to divest from investments with “countries of concern,” and was on the blessing list. One final blessed bill is HB 2704, enacting the No-Impact Home-Based Business Fairness Act. Municipalities could not prohibit a “no-impact” home-based business or require a person to apply, register, or obtain any permit, license, variance, or other type of prior approval from the municipality.

NEXT WEEK

Next week, committees will continue to consider measures from the other chamber. Both the House and Senate Appropriations Committees have full agendas. Monday, there will be a Joint Meeting of the House and Senate Education Committees to discuss SB 532, establishing a blueprint for literacy. The Senate Education Committee has scheduled the bill for hearing next Thursday.

The Senate Assessment and Taxation Committee will have a hearing on several sales tax exemption and tax credit bills. One sales tax exemption measure is SB 435, providing a sales tax exemption for period products, diapers, and incontinence products. SB 509 establishes an income tax credit for taxpayers with eligible dependent children not enrolled in public school. SB 498 establishes a tax credit for contributions to eligible charitable organizations operating pregnancy centers or residential maternity facilities and establishes a child tax credit.

Next Thursday, the House Federal and State Affairs Committee will have hearings on HB 2807, providing for the appointment of delegates to a convention of states under Article V of the U.S. Constitution. The committee will also hear HB 2803, creating the Kansas Gun Rights Preservation Act to prohibit the commandeering of state resources to enforce federal gun control against law-abiding citizens.
